A glimpse of Government High School, Kigwema

Government High School, Kigwema, is about 14 km away from Kohima. It was established in the year 1946. Presently, the school has the enrolment of 127 students (58 boys and 69 girls). This school has consecutively produced cent percent results in HSLC examinations for the past two years and hoping that the current 36 students of Class 10 will keep up that tradition during their HSLC Examination next year 2023.

The students in this school are helped and taught by a group of dedicated staff (16 teaching and 10 non-teaching staff) who come regularly for their duties. All the teaching faculty members from St Joseph’s (Autonomous), Jakhama, who made a visit to this school today were greatly impressed by the way these teachers help and teach their students under the capable leadership of the Headmistress, Madam Kevitsiano Luho.

The days’ programmed started with the combined session in the GHS, Kigwema assembly hall. The combined session was chaired by Mr James HK, Head, Department of English. Mr Mesehol Kweho invoked God’s blessing upon everyone and for success of the days’ programme. This was followed by messages from Dr Fr Pezalhoukho George and Madam Kevitsiano Luho, the Headmistress of Government High School, Kigwema. After the vote of thanks from Mr Reimaya Muinao, the Coordinator, Department of History, the students were divided into two groups according to their respective classes. The resource persons of day, Dr Mhonthung Yanthan and Mr Antidong Jamir addressed to the students in two different rooms simultaneously, whereas Fr Pezalhoukho George sat in the third room and offered counselling service to some of the students. The day’s programme came to an end with a group photo.

Report on Book signing event

Time : 1:00 p.m.

Date : 6 October, 2022

Venue : Indoor Stadium

The Student's Council in collaboration with the 'Letters Run' Team organised a Book signing event for the Book entitled "Once Upon a Time in Kohima", a debut novel of Konaei Shongdok. The event was initiated with the motive of artistic promotion and cultural care.

Ten students from each class were selected to attend the Book signing program. Readers and students who enjoy the art of stand up comic and violin enthusiasts were a part of the event. Approximately, 400 students showed up for the program.

The program started off with an invocation by Tangsoi, the President of BBA Department which was followed by addressal by the Student's Council President. A poetry on "why I write.." was read aloud by Lideno Kikon after which the audience was highly elated by the opening satire made by Sam with his comic punch lines. Jonthonnye Kemp and Rokonguno Zashumo presented some euphonious pieces which were pleasing to the ear. Konaei Shongdok who is the author of the book "Once Upon a Time in Kohima" narrated his stories on how he started writing books and summarised on why he wrote this book. He stated that it took him 94 days to complete this very book. It was an encouragement to the students especially to the ones who aspires to be an author someday. There was questions and interaction session where many students came up with various questions which apparently showed the students zeal to learn something. Aphong Konyak closed the event with another comedic performance. A word of gratitude was expressed by the host and the program concluded with the signing of the Book "Once Upon a Time in Kohima". The program ended with a great success.

Mushroom Spawn Cultivation

An Innovative undertaking on Mushroom Spawn production by the Department of Botany

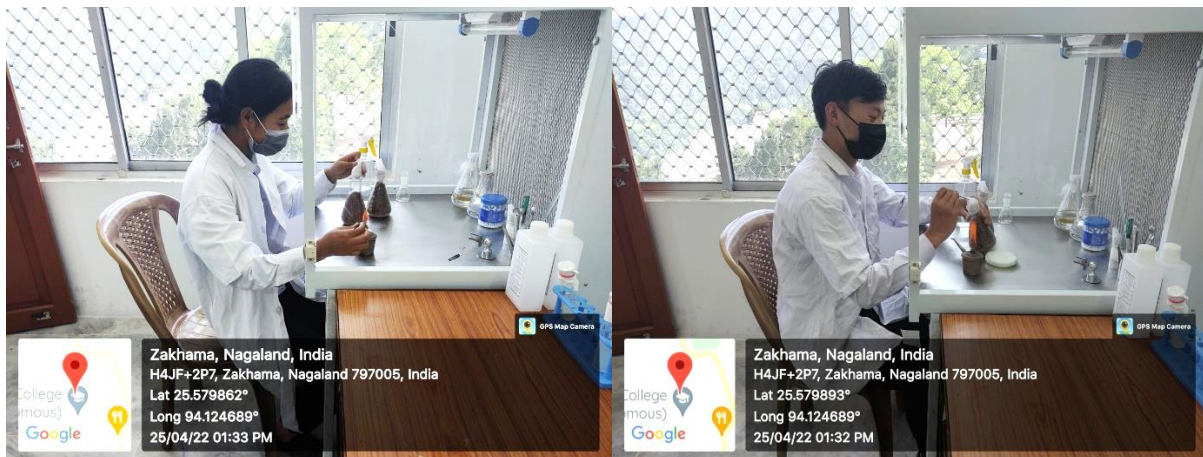

Mushroom cultivation, an environmentally friendly farming has played an integral part in agriculture. Being one of the ideal food items, mushroom needs to be explored for its impact in the economy, medicinal and nutritional properties and in the maintenance of health. There are about 2000 species of mushroom and only a small percent has been exploited the world over. Role of mushroom in sustainability and food security makes mushroom cultivation an important area to be discussed and practiced in a large scale.

Oyster Mushroom

The Pleurotus spp. derives their name due to the oyster-like shape. It has a wide range of temperature adaptability making it resilient to climatic conditions and therefore, available almost round the year.

Spawn production

Spawn comprises of mycelia of the fungus profusely multiplying on a substrate such as wheat or paddy grains. For the production of good quality spawn, supplies such as paddy grains, sterile laboratory conditions with laminar air flow and storage temperature of about $25\pm 2^{\circ}\text{C}$ were taken into considerations to avoid any contamination.

Students inoculating mycelium from pure culture media

Pure culture preparation

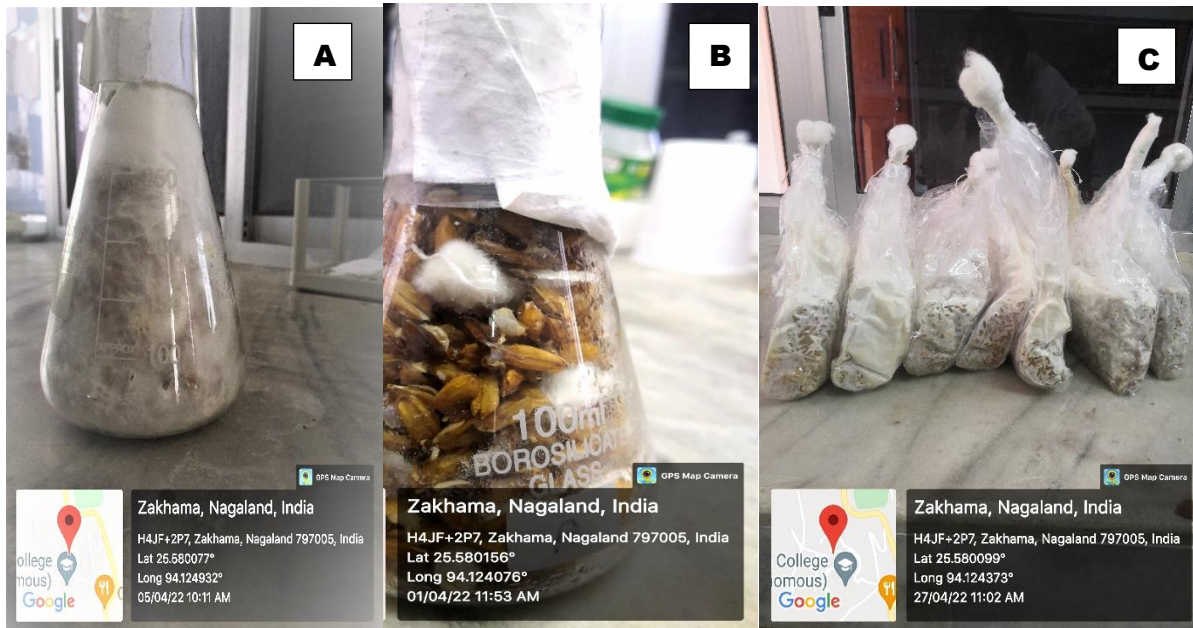

Pure culture of Oyster mushroom was obtained using Potato Dextrose Agar (PDA) media. The mycelia plug is placed on the petri plates containing the media and incubated at a temperature of $25\pm 2^{\circ}\text{C}$. In about a week or two mycelium is observed on the entire surface of the media ready to be inoculated.

Mycelium growth of Oyster mushroom in PDA media

Spawn preparations

Paddy grains as a suitable substrate is washed and pressurized to open the husk grains. After excess water is drained, about 20g of calcium carbonate (CaCO_3) is mixed with per kg of grains to increase the pH suitable for the rapid growth of spawn. The mixture of about 200g is filled in a polypropylene bag and plugged with cotton plugs, autoclave for about 1 or 2 hours. Once the polypropylene bags were cooled, mycelium from pure culture media and tissue taken aseptically from the stalk were inoculated inside the laminar air flow and stored in a dark room. Mycelium were observed in about a week.

A. Mycelium observed in paddy grain. B. Tissue culture. C. Spawn of Oyster mushroom.

PROSPECT

The opportunities mushroom cultivation holds can open ample doors for the benefit of people in need of employment and people in general. As food demand increases, mushroom cultivation can decrease burden on other food produce due to its inexpensive and easy availability of requirements needed for cultivation. For the health conscious, it serves as a great dietary food. The medicinal and nutritional properties can be explored creating more avenues. Production of good quality spawn in itself is a promising endeavor, which is the key factor for the success of mushroom cultivation.
